International Symposium on COVID-19 and Models of Governance in East Asia and the World

The novel coronavirus, now officially known as COVID-19, first struck in China's Wuhan and has now become a worldwide pandemic. Beijing's handling of the coronavirus outbreak has been controversial but it was the first country which contained the spreading of the disease more successfully than other localities. Meanwhile, other East Asian jurisdictions, including Japan, South Korea, Taiwan, Hong Kong and Singapore, have adopted different approaches to fight the pandemic.

This Symposium, jointly organized by the Centre for Chinese and Comparative Law (RCCL) and the Public Law and Human Rights Forum (CPLR) of the School of Law of City University of Hong Kong, will convene a group of leading scholars and policymakers from Asia and other parts of the world to evaluate the performance of different models/approaches of fighting the pandemic in Asia and examine governance related regulatory issues concerning legitimacy, rule of law, rights protection, policy-making process, public health system, government-business relations, corporate social responsibility, regional economic integration, and global governance.

Time: 9:00am (HKT) – 6:00pm (HKT)
